This workshop is offered to give UW-Whitewater students the opportunity to be involved in community engagement through participating in a university program. Students in this workshop will learn the history of UW-Whitewater within the context of the UW System, the Whitewater community and the impact the university has on the region (socially, economically and civically). Students in this course will engage with the community through on and off campus programs, representing UW-Whitewater as Willie the Warhawk or as Willie's chaperone, and through their work as ambassadors of the university.

In the United States, early childhood education and care (ECEC) is heavily influenced by the government through the fiscal investments made and the regulations that are applied to those programmatic and workforce investments. Always important, the nature of and approach to governmental policy-making are instrumental to the delivery of quality and equitable services for young children. But as the sector expands and builds on its extant services and programs (e.g., Head Start and Early Head Start, the Child Care and Development Block Grant, state-funded pre-Kindergarten, Part C and Part B of IDEA early intervention), critical new issues come to the fore: How to handle increasing investments in ways that evoke quality and equity? How to forge meaningful services amongst federal, state, and community investments and regulations? How to forge a strategic policy agenda? How to develop effective advocates and policy leaders? How to enjoin diverse entities and players to create an effective system of services for young children and their families? And how to marshal external players, including the communications, research, and policy communities? To address these issues, this course is designed to focus on: (i) the practice and process of policy-making; (ii) the practice of policy advocacy; and (iii) leadership and ethics.
